Introduction

Many of us find that as we get older we start to think more about where we live. Do you want to stay where you are, but could do with some support to make life easier? Would repairs or adaptations make living there more comfortable? Perhaps you’re thinking about moving somewhere smaller or nearer to family and friends. Or you may be considering sheltered accommodation.

This guide aims to give you the basic information about these different possibilities and explains how to find out more about your options.

Throughout this guide you will find suggestions for organisations that can offer further information and advice on your rights and options. Their contact details can be found under ‘Useful organisations’ (see pages 28–34). Contact details for organisations near you can usually be found in your local phone book. If you have difficulty finding them, your local Age UK should be able to help (see page 28).

As far as possible, the information given in this guide is applicable across the UK.

This symbol indicates who to contact for the next steps you need to take.
Thinking about your options

Where we live can have a big impact on our quality of life. So if you’re considering a move, think first about how to get the most out of making a change.

• Are you looking for familiarity? Security? Privacy?

• Do you want to live in a new environment?

• Do you like the idea of a sense of community?

You may want to stay in your home, but need your home adapted to make it easier to get around. Or perhaps you want to maintain your independence, while having someone to call on in an emergency.

Think about what you might need in the future, as well as what you want now. Finding out as much as possible about all the options gives you the best chance of making the right decision.

Talking through the possibilities with family or friends, or taking independent advice, can also be very helpful. But choosing where and how you live should be your decision; no one should try to persuade you to do something that you’re not sure about.
Staying at home

Staying in your own home doesn’t necessarily mean that things have to stay the same. A few simple changes could make life a lot easier.

Your home may need some repairs, improvements or adaptations to make it safer or more comfortable. If you are a tenant you have certain rights to have repairs carried out. Let your landlord know as soon as possible what repairs need to be done. If you’re a homeowner or private tenant living in England, call Foundations (see page 31) to find out if there’s a home improvement agency in your area, or check their website. If you live in Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland, contact the relevant organisation for your nation (see page 31). Home Improvement Agencies (sometimes called Care and Repair) give advice and practical assistance with home repairs, improvements and adaptations. They may also provide a handyperson service. If you live in Northern Ireland you may be able to get a home improvement grant from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive (see page 33).

If you live in England or Wales, the Age UK Group offers handyperson schemes to older people in some areas who meet certain criteria, to assist with small repairs and reduce risks in the home. Contact Age UK Advice (see page 28) for more information and to see what is available in your area. If you want to find a reliable tradesperson, see if your local Age UK runs a ‘Trusted Trader’ scheme which can recommend someone, or contact the TrustMark scheme for help finding local tradespeople who comply with government-endorsed standards (see page 34).
If you’re worried about having an accident or falling ill while you’re alone at home, you could get a community alarm. Community alarms allow you to call for help even if you can’t get to a phone. Your local council will probably operate a community alarm service, contact them to find out more. Age UK also provides Personal Alarms* – for more information about the service and the likely costs call 0800 77 22 66.

For more information about staying at home, see our free guides Adapting your home and Care at home, and our free factsheets Funding repairs, improvements and adaptations and Disability equipment and how to get it. For more information for tenants, see our factsheet Tenants’ rights – repairs. In Scotland, see Age Scotland’s factsheet Older homeowners – financial help with repairs and adaptations.

*Age UK Personal Alarm is a product name of and is provided by Aid-Call Limited, which is a commercial services arm of Age UK.
Support to help you stay at home

You may want to stay in your own home, but need some assistance – perhaps help with getting up and going to bed, bathing or preparing meals. Local councils (in Northern Ireland this would be your health and social care trust) are responsible for assessing the needs of older and disabled people, and arranging services that can help you to stay in your own home. The sort of services provided can include:

- home help to assist with general household tasks
- home care to help with things like bathing and dressing
- meals on wheels
- lunch clubs, social clubs or day centres
- respite care to give you or your carer a break.

Your local council should have information on its care services available in a printed format or online. You can ask your local social services department (or social work department in Scotland) to send it to you.

The information should explain how to apply for care services in your area. Usually you just need to get in touch with the social services department (social work department in Scotland), explain your situation and ask for an assessment of your needs. If it is agreed that you need care services, the local council will arrange for these to be provided. They may charge you for these services.
You may want to think about whether using a computer could help you do certain tasks, for example, you could order your food shopping online and get it delivered to your door. Being online is also a good way of staying in touch with friends and family.

If you aren’t confident using a computer, your local Age UK or UK Online centre can help. Call Age UK Advice or UK Online centres for more information (see pages 28 and 34). Our free guide Making the most of the internet has information on setting up a computer at home.

For more information see our free guides Care at home and Advice for carers, and our free factsheet Local authority assessment for community care services. For a similar version of this factsheet in Scotland or Wales, contact Age Scotland or Age Cymru.

Homeshare

In some parts of the country there are schemes called Homeshare. The terms of the schemes vary but will involve matching you with someone who needs somewhere to live and can offer help around the home. ‘Homesharers’ are often younger people, students or public service keyworkers who are finding it difficult to find affordable housing near where they work.

To find out more about the schemes and where they are located, contact Homeshare International (see page 32).
Equity release

Equity release is a way that older homeowners can release cash from their home without having to move. You borrow money against the value of your home, but pay nothing back until your home is sold – either after your death or when you go into long-term care. Alternatively, you can raise money by selling your home, or part of it, but continue to live in it until you die or go into long-term care.

Equity release can be a way to release some spare cash or to fund repairs or adaptations. However, it’s a big decision and you are strongly advised to consider all your options before deciding on this scheme. You should also take independent financial and legal advice. See our free leaflet Equity release for more information.

Gifted Housing

If you own your home and are having problems managing it but do not want to move, you may want to consider the Age UK Gifted Housing scheme. Under this scheme, you donate your property to Age UK and, in return, Age UK takes responsibility for maintaining the property, and pays Council Tax, water charges and property insurance. The Gifted Housing Service also provides a Care Co-ordinator and Housing Manager who will give you support, help you to arrange care and support at home if you need it, and help you decide on future care and housing options. This established service gives an alternative to people in later life who may not have close family and want to remain in their own homes for as long as possible.
Make sure that you take professional, independent advice first, and consider what would happen if there was a change in your personal circumstances. This service is not available in Scotland or Northern Ireland.

For more information, contact Age UK Gifted Housing (see page 28).

Making the right move

If you decide that you want to move, it will only be a success if your new home is right for you. Ask yourself these questions before making a decision.

• Is there accommodation available within your budget?

• What are the local facilities like? Is there a post office, shop or bank nearby? Will you be able to keep up your hobbies and interests? Are there social clubs and places of worship in the area?

• What is the public transport like? Are buses regular? Is there a local train station? Even if you drive now, there could be a time when you do not want to or cannot continue driving.

• Will your friends or family be able to visit easily?

• Do you like the area? Do you feel safe?

• If you are a couple, how will the other manage if one of you dies?

• Will your new home be suitable or easy to adapt if your needs change in the future?

• What type of heating system does it have? Is it easy to keep it warm? See our free guide Save energy, pay less for information on heating your home and energy efficiency.
Downsizing

You may find that you’re able to manage better if you move to a smaller property. This can have several benefits, including:

- releasing equity which can be used to supplement your pension if you are a homeowner
- reducing running costs, housework and maintenance.

The cost of moving and setting up a new home can be expensive. You will need to pay estate agent’s fees, legal fees, stamp duty and removal costs, and there may be other costs too. Any additional money you’re left with after the sale may affect your eligibility for means-tested benefits.

If you’re looking to rent in the private sector, consider availability and prices in the area you want to live in and what security of tenancy it offers. Tenants of local authorities and housing associations may also be able to downsize and there are sometimes financial incentives to transfer to a smaller property.

Before deciding whether moving to a smaller property is right for you, think about how much space you’ll need, such as for hobbies or entertaining friends. Will it suit your needs in the future if, for example, your care requirements change?

To find out what is available, contact estate or letting agents in the area you want to live in. Visit the Accessible Properties website at www.accessible-property.org.uk to view accessible or adapted properties for sale and to rent (see page 29).

To find out more about tenancy security, see our free factsheet Tenants’ rights – security of tenure. In Scotland, see Age Scotland’s factsheet Private tenants’ rights.
‘The house seemed too big for just the two of us and the garden was becoming a burden. We’ve now moved to a two-bedroom flat nearby. It was difficult getting rid of some of our furniture but now we’re settled we spend a lot less time on housework and gardening.’
Moving in with family

Moving in with family can seem like an attractive option and in many cases it works well. But it’s important for you all to be realistic and make sure you all have the same expectations.

Consider the practical aspects. What sort of care will you need and who will be able to provide this for you? Will the home need to be adapted?

You also need to be clear about financial and legal arrangements. For example, will you pay rent or help towards bills? If you live with a couple, what would happen if they split up? What would happen if one of you ends the arrangement – for example, if you need to move into a care home? If you invest in your relatives’ property, or purchase a property jointly, there may be implications if you have to be means-tested for assistance with care home fees at some future point.

It’s important for you all to be realistic and make sure you all have the same expectations.
Be sure to get independent legal advice separately from any advice obtained by your family and consider having a formal agreement drawn up. It might seem awkward to discuss things of this kind, but it’s better for you and your family to be clear about matters from the outset and know what to do if the arrangement doesn’t work out. If you need to find a solicitor, contact the relevant Law Society for your nation (see page 32). Age UK Enterprises Limited* also offers Legal Services which are provided by the law firm Irwin Mitchell. Call Irwin Mitchell on 0845 685 1076 for more information. Subjects covered include legal arrangements when moving in with family.

Renting from your local council

In many areas, local councils are the main providers of rented housing. If you live in Northern Ireland, contact your local Housing Executive office to find out about houses available to rent.

Council housing is allocated according to the council’s allocation or letting policy, which will give priority to applicants seen as having the greatest need. You have the right to see this policy.

To apply for council housing, you will have to provide information about yourself, such as where you live now, your income, your savings and your health (except in Scotland, where your income won’t be taken into account). This is used to establish what level of priority the council will give your application, including any specific needs, such as being on the ground floor because of mobility problems. Most rented sheltered accommodation is administered by councils and housing associations (see page 18).

Many councils operate choice-based lettings. This means that all accommodation vacancies are published by your council through channels such as local newspapers, newsletters or websites. As an applicant, you would need to make a bid for a vacancy that looks suitable.
If you are already a council tenant but wish to move to sheltered housing or downsize, ask the council about a transfer. How quickly this can be done depends on the availability of this kind of housing and whether the council considers you to need sheltered housing.

Contact the local authority and ask for details about its allocations policy and application procedure. See our free factsheet Council and housing association housing. In Scotland, see Age Scotland’s free factsheet Rights of council and housing association tenants.

Renting from a housing association

Housing associations are non-profit organisations that provide housing for rent, including sheltered housing. Many of them have an agreement with the local council that they will offer housing to people already on the council’s register.

Some housing associations accept direct referrals but they may still require you to put your name on the council’s housing register. To find out what is available and whether you are eligible, contact the housing association you wish to apply to.

See our free factsheet Council and housing association housing for more detailed information. In Scotland, see Age Scotland’s free factsheet Rights of council and housing association tenants.
Moving to another area

If you’re already a council or housing association tenant, you may be able to swap homes with someone who wants to move to your area. You’ll need to get your landlord’s permission to do this. Make sure you understand what type of tenancy you’ll have and what your rent and other bills will be. Check that you’re happy with the state of repairs at the property you’ve chosen.

Renting from a private landlord

You can find housing to rent using local newspapers, websites or a letting agency. You should not be charged by a letting agency, unless it has found you a property. You may have to pay a deposit and rent in advance.

In Scotland, a landlord or agency shouldn’t ask you for a deposit or any other fee. However, this law is difficult to enforce in practice, so you might have to decide whether it’s worth paying an extra charge.

Most private rental property is let on assured shorthold tenancies (or short assured tenancy in Scotland). This means that the landlord will have the right to end your tenancy after the first six months. Check the terms of your tenancy agreement for how much deposit you have to pay, how the rent is paid and who is responsible for maintenance and repairs.

See our free factsheet Finding private rented accommodation for more information. If you are unsure about the terms of a contract, contact Shelter (see page 34) or a local information and advice agency such as Citizens Advice (see page 30).
Moving into sheltered housing

Sheltered housing (sometimes called retirement housing) is specially designed for older people. There are many different types of sheltered housing schemes. Some will have a scheme manager (also known as a warden) who lives onsite or offsite. All schemes should provide 24-hour emergency help through an alarm system.

Sheltered housing might appeal to you if you want to live independently but in a smaller and easier-to-manage home. It offers the added reassurance of having an emergency alarm, or a responsible person to turn to for assistance. Accommodation is usually self-contained, but there are often communal areas, such as the lounge, laundry room and garden. Many schemes also run social events for residents.

When you are looking for sheltered housing, consider:

• the location of the property
• the size of the property
• the responsibilities of the scheme manager
• the level of support available
• what costs you would be liable for
• any rules that might affect you, such as whether you are allowed to keep a pet.

See our free factsheet Retirement (sheltered) housing. If you want to find out more about sheltered housing, contact Elderly Accommodation Counsel to find out what’s available in your area (page 31).
Renting sheltered housing

Most sheltered housing for rent is provided by councils (known as local housing executives in Northern Ireland) and by housing associations.

To find out about this type of sheltered housing, contact the housing department at your local council. It will tell you about procedures for applying. There’s often a waiting list for rented sheltered housing, so ask how long you might have to wait and what priority your application will be given.

Each local council has its own allocation policy, which explains how it decides who gets offered council housing.

In Northern Ireland, each local housing executive has the same policy.

If you want to move to a particular area or property, you may have to wait longer than you would if you were prepared to look at whatever is available. Again, talk to your local housing department so that they know what sort of housing you’re willing to consider.

A small amount of sheltered housing is available to rent privately. Although there’s usually no waiting list or priority selection, rents may be higher. Contact Elderly Accommodation Counsel to find out more (see page 31).

What next?

Contact your local council (or housing executive in Northern Ireland) to find out what renting options there are in your area.
Buying retirement housing

Retirement housing that’s available to buy is usually built by private developers. For your own protection, buy only from a builder who is registered with an accredited body such as the National House-Building Council (NHBC), and is covered by its Sheltered Housing Code (see page 33).

Once all the properties have been sold, the scheme is usually run by a separate management group, which employs the scheme manager and organises maintenance and other services. The quality of the service provided by the management company can have a great effect on a scheme. Check whether the managers are members of a recognised trade body such as the Association of Retirement Housing Managers (ARHM). The ARHM produces an approved code of practice that includes both good practice and legal requirements.

Your rights as a leaseholder are partly established in law and partly in the terms of your lease. Be sure to get independent, professional advice on your rights and responsibilities before you sign your lease. Find out about the running costs, such as the service charge, ground rent, Council Tax and utility bills.

To find out more about buying sheltered housing, see our free factsheet Buying retirement housing. Elderly Accommodation Counsel can help you find out what’s available (see page 31).
Extra-care sheltered housing

Extra-care sheltered housing offers more support to residents than other retirement housing, but allows them to retain more independence than moving to a care home would. Residents live in self-contained flats but meals may be provided, either in the flat or in a shared dining room. Staff are often available to provide personal care, too.

Contact Elderly Accommodation Counsel (see page 31) for suggestions and more information about extra-care sheltered housing.

Almshouses

Almshouses are run by charitable trusts mainly for older people. Each charity has a policy on whom it will assist, such as residents who live in a particular geographical area or workers who have retired from a particular trade. A resident occupies an almshouse as a beneficiary of a charity and does not have the same legal rights as a tenant elsewhere. There is no security of tenure under law and your rights as a resident will be outlined in a ‘Letter of Appointment’ provided by the trustees.

For more information about living in an almshouse, contact the Almshouse Association (see page 29).
Abbeyfield

Abbeyfield societies are voluntary organisations that run supported sheltered housing in family-style households with 8–12 residents. Supervised by a house manager, the schemes usually provide two hot meals a day. Although most Abbeyfield residents are tenants, some have a licence, which means that their tenure is less secure. If you’re interested in an Abbeyfield scheme, ask whether this is the case and get advice from a solicitor or Citizens Advice Bureau before making a decision to move in.

For more information, contact Abbeyfield (see page 29).

In Scotland, contact Abbeyfield Scotland (see page 29).

Park homes

Park homes, also known as mobile homes, are single-storey houses installed on a park-home site. They can be an affordable way of moving into an area that might otherwise be too expensive. The legal position of a park-home owner is unique because you own the park home but rent the land on which it stands. Make sure you understand the legal implications before buying one and that you have the correct level of insurance. Take independent advice and talk to people on the particular site to see how happy they are with the arrangements.

See our free factsheet Park homes for more information.
'Our move to retirement housing has been a good move and we are pleased to no longer have the burdens of running the house and garden.'

Derek, 71, moved to retirement housing with his wife following a heart attack.

‘After I had my heart attack, my wife and I decided it was time to find a smaller home. Our move to retirement housing has been a good move and we are pleased to no longer have the burdens of running the house and garden.

‘The residents’ lounge is particularly good – it’s the venue for social activities like coffee mornings and is somewhere residents can read the paper, talk about the news and enjoy a cup of coffee.

‘The scheme we live in has most of what we need. There’s an alarm system and a warden. We take most meals in the dining room. The lounge gets quite busy with people and their visitors but we can go back to our flat when we want a bit more privacy.’
Care homes

If you think you need more personal care than sheltered housing can give you, moving to a care home could be an option. Care homes sometimes provide nursing care too, so find out what levels of care are provided before you move. Care homes are staffed 24 hours a day and all meals are provided. Moving to a care home may seem like a big step, but it can offer the opportunity to form new friendships and provide a safe, comfortable place to live.

How you pay for a care home depends on your personal situation. Your local council may be able to pay all or part of your fees if your capital and savings are below a certain limit.

For more information about choosing and paying for a care home see our free information guide Care homes and our factsheets Paying for permanent residential care and Finding care home accommodation. Age Cymru and Age Scotland have similar factsheets on paying for care in Wales and Scotland respectively – contact them for a copy.
Moving home checklist

If you decide to move, this handy checklist should help.

• Have you cleared out things you no longer need? This is especially important if you’re moving to smaller accommodation.

• Have you got two or three written quotes from different removal firms if you’re going to use one? It’s a good idea to compare prices before making your final decision.

• Have you made sure the tradespeople you’re going to use belong to a professional organisation, such as the Removals Industry Ombudsman Scheme (see page 33)?

• Have you checked whether your home contents insurance covers you for the move? If it doesn’t, arrange for transit insurance.

• Have you made sure that your home contents insurance has been arranged at your new home for your arrival?

• Have you made a list of people and organisations that you need to contact about your move?

• If you have pets, have you asked someone you know to look after them on the day that you move?

• Have you contacted utility companies, such as gas and electricity suppliers, to let them know about your move?

• If you have broadband at home, have you checked with the company that provides it about moving your service?

• Have you thought about packing a ‘survival kit’ for the day of your move? It could include cash for emergencies, food, washing-up liquid, light bulbs, soap, and things to make a cup of tea.
• Have you made sure that the boxes you use are strong enough? Remember not to make them too heavy to lift through overloading.

• Have you contacted your local Post Office if you want to get your post redirected?

• Make sure you dispose of any documents safely by shredding them.

When you’ve moved:

• Check the smoke alarm in your new home.

• Take gas, electricity and water readings straight away.

• Make sure that you review your home insurance, both contents and building. Compare insurance quotes from different companies to make sure that you get the best deal for your circumstances. Age UK’s commercial arm, Age UK Enterprises Limited*, offers insurance for older people through Ageas Insurance. Call Ageas on 0800 032 5594 for more information.

Register with a doctor as soon as you can, if you’ve moved to a new area, and find a new dentist and optician. To ensure that you inform all the relevant people about your move, order a copy of our free LifeBook by calling 0845 685 1061. It’s an easy way to record the practical details of your life, such as your insurance and utility providers, who your key health professionals are (if relevant) and the contact details for your family and close friends.

*Age UK Home Insurance is provided and managed by Ageas Insurance Ltd. Registered address: Ageas House, Tollgate, Eastleigh, Hampshire SO53 3YA, England. Registered number 354568. Age UK Enterprises Ltd and Ageas Insurance Ltd are each authorised and regulated by the Financial Services Authority.
Moving abroad

Moving abroad can seem like an attractive option, particularly if you’re considering moving to sunnier climes.

Many of the things to think about are the same as for moves within the UK, but there are some specific points to bear in mind. Will you be comfortable communicating in another language? What are the health and social care facilities like? Who is expected to pay for care? Most benefits are not payable when you leave the UK and your State Retirement Pension may be frozen if you move abroad.

If you do decide to return to the UK following a move abroad, it may take some time to establish your rights to services, benefits and housing. While these things are sorted out, will you have somewhere to live and the finances to support yourself? Read our free factsheet Returning from abroad if you’re in this situation.

For more information, see our free information guide Retiring abroad.
